Predation is a biological interaction where a predator (an organism, often an animal) kills and eats its prey (another organism). Predators are adapted and often highly specialized for hunting, with acute vision, hearing, and sense of smell. Many predatory animals, both vertebrates such as lions and sharks, and invertebrates such as mantises, have sharp claws or jaws to grip, kill, and cut up ...

Natural selection is the differential survival and reproduction of individuals due to differences in phenotype. It is a key mechanism of evolution, the change in the heritable traits characteristic of a population over generations. Charles Darwin popularised the term "natural selection", contrasting it with artificial selection, which is intentional, whereas natural selection is not.
